The HAO has incorporated installations of these hookups in its five year plan. The Council felt quarterly inspections were too frequent. The HAO has changed to a semi-annual inspection system. There were some complaints about playgrounds, although the HAO was in the process of adding/renovating two playgrounds. Residents felt one site needed a youth center; the HAO has included in its five year plan the cost of partnering with an outside non profit service agency to provide gymnasium that would serve children in two HAO sites that are in the neighborhood of the proposed gymnasium. Deconcentration Policy

DECONCENTRATION POLICY

.4 DECONCENTRATION POLICY.4 DECONCENTRATION POLICY It is the policy of the HAO to provide persons with safe, decent, and affordable housing in a nondiscriminatory fashion. The HAO does not offer units to persons based upon any prohibited classification. The HAO does not assign its lowest income applicants or tenants to any specific or generalized project site, building type, or location, and does not concentrate lower or higher income persons in lower or higher income project sites.

At the beginning of each fiscal year, the HAO will review its populations in each project site in terms of their income levels. Statistically significant variances will result in the HAO undertaking permissible measures to encourage that lower income persons reside in higher income projects and that higher income persons reside in lower income projects until the statistical variance is no longer significant. Project sites housing elderly and/or disabled persons will be subject to affirmative deconcentration measures offered to elderly and/or disabled tenants or applicants.

The HAO's efforts with regard to deconcentration are subject to all applicable civil rights and fair housing laws. Project sites housing elderly and/or disabled persons will be subject to affirmative measures in this regard to the extent that affirmative measures can be offered to elderly and/or disabled tenants or applicants.

Further deconcentration efforts may follow further clarification of this regulation and guidance from the HUD office.

DECONCENTRATION INCENTIVES

If necessary, the HAO may employ certain affirmative measures, such as, allowing a higher income tenant or applicant to move into a unit in a lower income project ahead of another tenant or applicant on a waiting list who has declined to move into the lower income site; or, allowing a lower income tenant or applicant to move into a unit in a higher income project ahead of another tenant or applicant on a waiting list who has declined to move into the higher income site. The HAO may also utilize site-based waiting lists to achieve the goal of deconcentration of poverty. The HAO is not limited to these methods of achieving this goal.

Use this section to provide any additional attachments referenced in the Plans.
