Executive Summary:

Do you remember the old bumper sticker, "Please God, give us one more boom, and we promise not to screw it up this time." In the past two years Southwestern Wyoming has been helped by a booming economy that has brought a lot of job openings to our small rural communities. This has created a severe labor shortage across the state. Many individuals have taken advantage of the work force shortage to land high paying jobs with benefits in the energy field and construction business. According the Wyoming Department of Workforce Services Wyoming created new jobs last year at the fastest pace in the nation.

The speculation in Evanston is that we need many new workers in the upcoming year, and workforce housing for them. Shelli Stewart of the Department of Workforce Service indicates that thousands of workers will be needed in the Pinedale Anticline, Jonah and Wamsutter fields in Sublette and Sweetwater counties over the next decade to develop 20,000 or more natural gas wells planned for in the region. Statewide growth projections estimate 38,000 more workers will be needed in Wyoming by 2012.

Boom is a word that people hesitate to use because it suggests a period of rapid wealth that sometimes leads to bust and recovery. Overbuilding can create a housing bubble. A boom can change financial decisions and can lead to a major over-building of homes in communities. The new homes are attractive and exciting in a state that has not seen development in the last 25 years. As attractive as this may be it can also be just as devastating. Homeowners are likely to assume that the increase in the price of their homes will carry on. This could lead to irrational exuberance on both the part of developers and home buyers. Homeowners are encouraged to take out loans against the increased value of their homes to finance consumption spending on non essential items like buying new cars or planning destination vacations and other frivolous luxuries. Homeowners may see less need to save for the future or retirement because they think that they will be able to sell their home at the bubble inflated price. Many of the homes in Evanston were purchased in the early 80's for $80,000 are now being sold for over $200,000. This has resulted in homeowners spending beyond their means. In these instances people risk serious financial hardship if housing prices tumble as the bubble deflates. Bubbles can be definitively identified in hindsight. Unfortunatley that is often times to little to late. The current subprime mortgage crisis, has been caused in a large part by a number of home owners unable to pay the mortgage as their home values declined. Freddie Mac and Countrywide Financial have warned of a housing bubble in the United States. These two financial entities warns that a recovery in the housing sector is not expected to occur at least until 2010. Home prices nation wide are falling like never before. The last time America saw home prices fall like this was the Great Depression. A housing bubble and falling home prices affect not only home valuations, but the nation's mortgage markets, home builders, home supply retail outlets, and developers.

It is widely believed that homeownership is the best way for low-income families to accumulate wealth and enter the middle class. There are reasons for questioning the wisdom of this view. In general many low-income homebuyers find that they are unable to hold onto their home due to a job loss or a change in family circumstances, and are forced to sell after a short period of time. A bubble in the housing market across much of the country may make this a particularly bad time for low-income families to move into homeownership. The popular notion that, unlike stocks, homes do not fall in value is believed to have contributed to the mania for purchasing homes.

Rental vacancy rates are extremely tight in southwest Wyoming and more specifically Evanston. Rates have declined steadily over the last several years, slipping from over 9% in 2004 to less than 1% in 2007. Average apartment rents in Evanston increased by 7.96 percent from $402.00 in 2005 to $434.00 in April of 2006. As shown below the average rental rates of the four largest apartment providers have increased by 74% in the past seven years. Furthermore the average home prices have accelerated sharply over the last few years. Prices in Evanston have increased by more than 22% between fiscal 2006 and 2007. Strategists suggest that by the end of 2007 the average home price in Evanston may be in excess of $200,000.00.

Most people recognize that not enough affordable housing exists in Wyoming. The housing crisis affects every community in Wyoming. As the cost of housing soars, middle class people are struggling to pay for housing. Skyrocketing housing costs outstrip wage income in many areas of Wyoming. A safe affordable home is the American dream come true. An estimated 54% of Wyoming households are unable to afford a house. The reality is that in America owning an affordable home or even finding a safe affordable rental unit is financially unattainable. In fact the problem is getting worse. The number of Wyoming families with worst case housing needs continues to grow, while the inventory of affordable housing shrinks.

Without more financial resources, the need for safe and affordable housing will not go away anytime soon. Relying on the private sector alone to alleviate today's housing crisis will not suffice. Private developers can easily build quality homes for families with high incomes, but developing housing for low and moderate incomes will require partnering with federal state, local officials and housing professionals.

The image of moving into a new place, getting an apartment of your own, working and saving money to purchase a home, fund an education, is how most people envision making the transitions to adulthood, and establishing themselves in America. However a declining supply of affordable housing in economic hot spots and rising rents are growing obstacles to this dream. A balanced housing policy in Wyoming is needed to address these challenges.

The time has come for our elected officials to address the growing crisis of inadequate, unsafe and unattainable housing. This crisis touches every community in the state.

The Evanston Housing Authority administers the Section 8 Voucher Program and the Public Housing Program in compliance with the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Major Goals in 2007/2008 include:

- 1) The Housing Authority provides housing services with four basic programs. The Housing Authority owns and manages programs that assist 281 families in 9 different developments scattered throughout Uinta County. It is the third largest public housing agency in Wyoming, serving 8% of Evanston's population. The Evanston Housing Authority is committed to maximizing its effectiveness in managing these units, keeping units in good repair, minimizing turn around rates on vacant units and assuring affordability for families. The cost of managing such a program has escalated in the past few years, especially with wages, health insurance, property insurance, gas and associated benefits. The Housing Authority will initiate a major program to seek funding which will help expand our programs to assist the less fortunate.
- 2) The Housing Authority will finalize the Housing Needs Assessment for Evanston, Wyoming. Hopefully this study will better help us understand the needs for our clientele and define a direction for future programs.
- 3) The Housing Authority will continue to seek public-private partnerships which will construct and make housing available to families in need. Examples of these partnerships include:

- a) The relationship the Sparrow Group to build 49 town homes utilizing the Tax Credit Program;
- b) Partner with the Wyoming Housing Network, the Town of Mountain View, and Union Telephone to complete a 24 unit town home subdivision, to provide work force housing.
- c) Evaluate the possibility to purchase the Winchester Apartments from Campbell-Hogue and Associates to preserve existing housing affordability in Evanston.
- d) Continue to seek funds with which to expand its various rental programs utilizing HOME, Tax credit and CDBG dollars.
